PRESIDENT'S ADVISORY PANEL
ON FEDERAL TAX REFORM
2005 JUL 21 A 11:05

Dear Chairman Mack and other Panel members:

As you consider proposals to reform the Internal Revenue Code, we urge you to protect the Low Income Housing Tax Credit (Housing Credit) and tax-exempt private activity housing bond (Housing Bond) programs, the most important and effective tools we have to address our nation's growing need for affordable housing.

It is imperative that you consider the impact of reform proposals on these programs. Even proposals that may seem to have no impact on the Housing Credit and Bond programs could have significant unintended consequences, as we discovered in 2003 when the Administration's dividend tax cut proposal threatened to reduce annual Housing Credit apartment production by more than one-third.

More than 14 million American working families of modest means spend at least 50 percent of their income on housing. Hundreds of thousands more live in substandard housing or are homeless. The Housing Credit and Bond programs help address these unmet needs by making homeownership and rental housing affordable to those families.

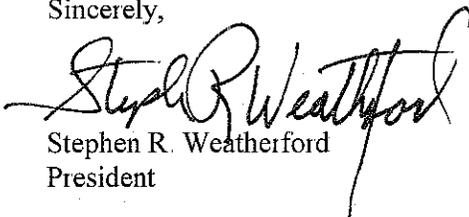

The Housing Credit and multifamily Housing Bond programs have been enormously successful. Since 1986, they have financed over 2.7 million apartments for lower-income families. The two programs finance 130,000 apartments each year and are the only significant producers of affordable rental housing.

Single-family Housing Bonds—Mortgage Revenue Bonds (MRB)—have made first-time homeownership possible for more than 2.5 million lower income families—more than 100,000 every year. The average MRB buyer earns $38,900—less than three-quarters of the national median family income.

Recent significant reductions in federal appropriations for housing programs despite the growing need are exacerbating the problem of affordable housing in many communities across the nation, making the Housing Credit and Bond programs even more important. Furthermore, these programs promote economic growth and increase employment.

I urge you to oppose tax reform proposals that would directly or indirectly harm these vital programs.

Sincerely,

Stephen R. Weatherford
President
